

These are simple but revealing money moments—real life situations involving our money with underlying motives and messages guiding our choices, resulting in real consequences. Often I see couples who chose their lifestyle before they chose their life; bought their houses before they thought about their homes; and people who chose the pursuit of wealth and lost the pursuit of Christ. As my dad says, this can go from “preachin’ to meddlin’!” As you explore these moments, ask God to reveal himself to you.

- To what end are you working so hard?

- In your efforts to gain, what might you be losing?

- How much of your efforts are focused solely to yourself? How much to serving others?

- What message are you giving your children if you were to give them more things, but less time?

Talking about LIFE and LIFESTYLE Conversation Starters

johnhputnam.com

- What is your lifestyle communicating to your children about money?
- How would you rate your joy from a time when you may have had less, compared to now when you may have more?
- What do you own that you don't really need, and what is it costing you to keep it?
- If you chose to experiment, what would need to change if you were decrease your spending budget by 10%? 20%?
- What percentage of your spending is based on what you HAVE to pay, NEED to pay, or WANT to pay?

- If you could sell your house for a profit and purchase a smaller one, potentially simplifying your budget and creating more financial margin, would you do it? Why, or why not?
- To what extent are your financial decisions influenced by what others think? By what God thinks?
- What role does generosity and giving play in your financial plans?
- Write a prayer that encompasses your desire to want God and pursue God as you explore your money moments.